To Us Is Born (Nobis Est Natus)
from the Codex Speciálník, c. 1500 A.D., Praha

Anonymous

Transcription/translation: Peter Kaplan <pefty@aya.yale.edu>, 2007

Altus

Tenor

Bassus

To us is born to-day from a vir-gin pure, the King of vic-vir-gin, a vir-gin pure, the King of vic-to-ry,

vir-gin pure, the King of vic-to-ry,

the King of vic-to-ry, the King of vic-to-ry,

King of vic-to-ry, the King of vic-to-ry,
In whom the moon, sun, earth, and all the heavenly stars spring forth throughout the ages, spring forth, throughout the ages, throughout the ages.
Now let us praise our Lord, the Son of Mary, the humble King,

Ma-ry, the Son of Ma-ry, the hum -ble King,

the hum -ble King, the hum -ble King!

the hum -ble King, the hum -ble King!
To Him be worship, thanks, and glory,

To Him be worship, thanks, and glory, glory, glory,

and also victory, now and

and victory for now and for evermore,

glory, and also victory,)

for evermore, for evermore!

for now and for evermore, for evermore!

for evermore, for now and for evermore!

[[ This edition, a down-transposed edition, and editions in the original Latin are all freely available at cpdl.org ]]